Keynote Speaker:

SHEILA AHUJA

Partner, Co-Head of India Practice Group, Allen & Overy, Singapore

Anti-suit injunctions are often sought when court proceedings are commenced in breach of an arbitration agreement. However, things are not quite plain sailing when anti-suit injunctions are brought by – or against – a non-party who, prima facie, is not entitled to rely on the arbitration agreement. What are the issues and challenges confronting a non-party in such situations? How have courts and tribunals dealt with these questions, particularly in a domain where caution and comity are commonly preached?
